SUSTAINABILITY REPORTING: Embedding Sustainability into your Corporate DNA

May 10-14, 2021 | 1:00PM-4:00PM
Philippine Time

Sustainability has become everybody's business. Faced with unprecedented challenges from local and global environmental and social realities, many institutions are adopting strategies to reduce their environmental impacts, help communities, address the risks and opportunities created by the need to create a more sustainable world, and report their performance along with these objectives

The most widely-referenced standards for sustainability reporting is published by the Global Reporting Initiative (GRI). Participants will be trained on how to use the GRI Standards, which is the focus of this workshop, in measuring and managing the organization's performance impact.

Course Overview

ADFIAP, through its Institute of Development Finance (IDF), is offering an innovative and results-oriented certification program that will enable the participants to complete within the training period, a principle-based sustainability reporting plan that an FI can adopt as a new form of communication with their stakeholders as well as reporting their performance impact on economic, environment, social and governance, (EESG) aligned with the UN Global Compact Principles and Sustainable Development Goals.

Training Objectives

At the end of the training course, participants would be able to:

1. Understand the value of stakeholders' engagement;
2. Evaluate internal processes and systems and identify opportunities to utilize technology and human capital for organizational excellence;
3. Formulate a comprehensive business reporting plan in a way that is easily translatable into action plans; and
4. Develop a sustainability report for the institution using the GRI Standards with cross-referencing with the UNGC principles and SDGs.
